News Release

Davis County Board of Health Changes Announced

(Farmington, Utah) – The Davis County Board of Health welcomed Ronald B. Garrison as the new board chair at the quarterly meeting held February 14th.

The Board of Health serves in an advisory and policy-making role for the Davis County Health Department. Garrison assumed his one-year position at the beginning of 2006 with February's meeting as his first serving in that capacity. He previously held the vice chair's position.

According to Garrison, "Our Board of Health continues to tackle important health issues effecting Davis County residents. I'm proud of the way our board members study these public health concerns, listen to citizen comments, and weigh the facts to make their informed decisions." Garrison works as the manager of Employment Services for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City.

South Weber City Mayor Joe Gergte joins the county's nine-person board of health as its newest member. His term of office runs until July 2010.
